Do you need to talk?

By Valentina Osorio

The research project was designed to provide support to people with depression in society, recommending two applications, the first being informative about the types of depression, causes, symptoms, treatments, among others, while the second has an alarm which can be configured at the time needed, an unofficial test and a suggestion box.

A comparison of the drugs was also made by a comparative table with side effects, dosage, operation and the effectiveness of the drug.

Experiences of the radial universe

By Mariana Parra

Podcasts have been one of the most formidable experiences to learn to express a broadcast by voice, dealing with topics that have developed in recent years and above all, in another language. The great effort that we put into developing each one was a lot, always insist that the expectation that they would be clear and interesting for the people of our institution.

FUN FACTS:

The word podcast is made up of two components. The first part of the word "pod" comes from Apple iPod, while the second part, from the English term used for radio broadcasts.

Mathematical human phenomenon

By Valentina Cuellar

It is a project developed for the area of mathematics to search for a natural phenomenon, the human body, etc., and associate it with mathematics.

In this case, it was decided to carry out a function in the Geogebra program, the derivative must also be applied, which is an operation where the elements of any type of mathematical problem are reduced.

The project is still under development, but it reminds the importance of this organ, since the heart rate is one of the indicators of health in the human body and the pulses per minute are measured.

Entrepreneur learnings

By Catalina Benitez

We all love the idea of success, but the reality is that very few of us are willing to do what it takes to achieve it.

With the creation of the Jolie company, we learned the value of perseverance to abandon rigidity and adopt a flexible attitude, oral and written communication skills that are indispensable to facilitate professional relationships, in relying on intuition and experience to mark the course that is wanted by the attitudes of leader, and promise to be faithful to the objectives.
