What have we learned? It is a complicated and time-consuming process to create a company, but many people told us that if we insist we could achieve it and so it was after investigating, carrying out accounting processes, legal documents, etc. everything became easier to continue with our process and be able to offer all our affection with you, our clients.

As a result, I believe that we obtained new knowledge and our marketing strategies, we found ways to meet and communicate with clients in person and virtually, we were able to see what our clients' needs were and how they were advised and in turn refused before the product or situations that weren't right. Every act and correction helped make IronSpace the company it is today.
